Children's Rights Exhibition

One of the goals of the Children's Rights Days is to talk about children's rights in a way to make children's voices be heard and amplified.. These voices are brought to the conference by the exhibition, which shows the drawn and written reflections of children.

The youngest ones with their drawings helped a little elfin what to bring to those children who lack something.

Older children had the possibility to write or draw rules for the adults.

The biggest ones finished sentences. Even though the beginning of the sentence was written by adults, children definitely shaped the message.

We would like to thank to the almost 300 children who participated and contributed. Let's be brave enough to hear their voices, and use this opportunity to turn the drawings and written words into a reality. Let's prove that their participation in this journey is real.
